From the results of practical research on teaching traditional music and art in high schools in Ninh Bình province over the past 10 years, the authors found that the teaching of traditional music and art has made positive contributions to training, fostering, and forming the ability to appreciate music and art, building aesthetic tastes for students. It has discovered and fostered young talents for a new generation in the field of traditional arts.

Ninh Bình province has been doing well in bringing local education into the mainstream training program, especially paying attention to the education of traditional culture. In light of that, the authors have researched and proposed solutions to further promote the teaching of Hát Xẩm in schools, improve the musical ability to appreciate and perform Hát Xẩm, contribute to the effective implementation of the task of preserving, developing, promoting the value of Hát Xẩm in the province in the current time.
